

Grounding relational concepts in the sensory-motor experience

Ivan I. Vankov

New Bulgarian University

Нов български университет

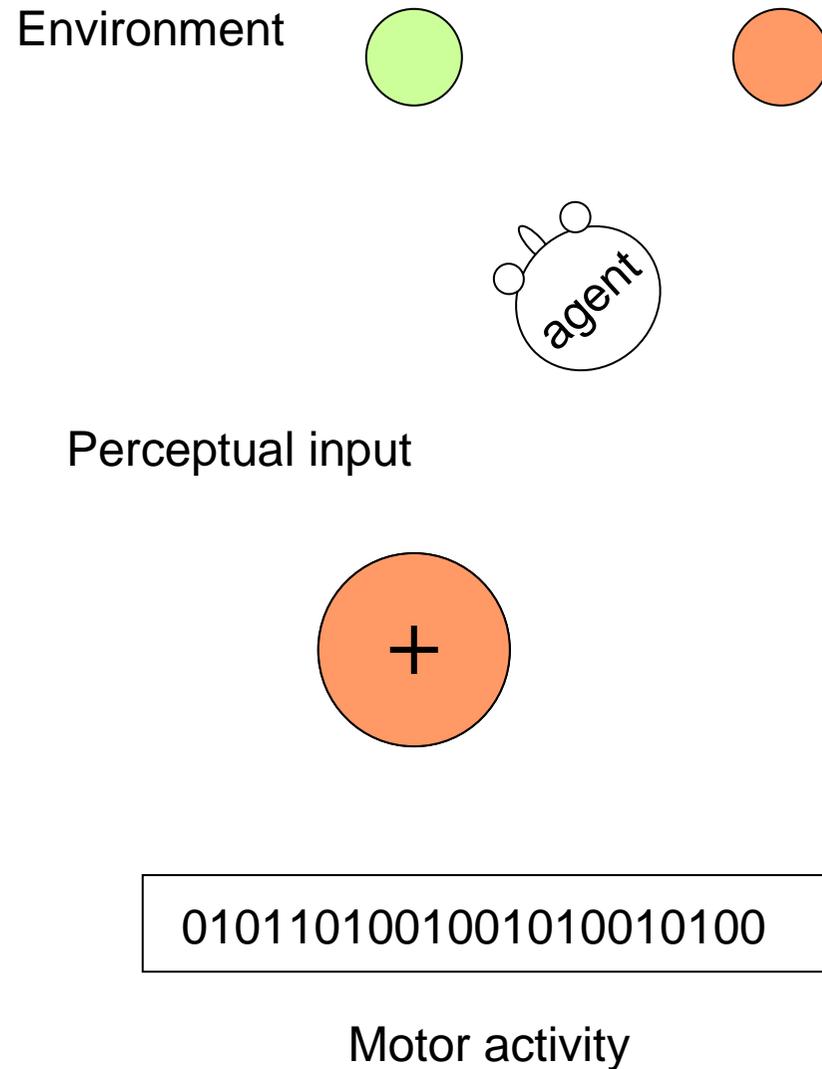

The problem

- Relations are particularly hard to ground
- Existing approaches usually take the existence of relational constituents for granted

Main point of our approach

- The role of time - relational representations are dynamic
- Embodiment – relational representations involve interaction with the environment

Grounding relations in the sensory-motor loop

Psychological evidence

